

TRAI has directed mobile operators to not fix termination charges on roaming calls among themselves. The termination charge should be uniformly set at Re 0.30 per minute for all roaming calls as prescribed by the Interconnect Usage Charges Regulation. The regulator stressed that there was no justification for a revenuesharing regime among the various players for roaming calls.

According to the recently released TRAI report, the terminating operator should only receive the termination charge and not share the revenue with the originator.
